ABOUT CREATURE SCULPTING

Creature Sculpting is a specialized area sculpture serving the film and video industries. Creature sculptors work along with game designer and film creators to design characters. All major films and games use sculptors in the initial development of their stories.

The process begins with the writers and directors of a project consulting with the sculptor. Sketches are drawn. The sculptor models small sculptures called maquettes, usually under 18 inches high. From these maquettes, computer artists create digital models used by the special fx department.

Creature sculptors also create life size facial sculptures used for creature masks and appliances. An appliance is a small foam rubber piece that is glued to the actor's face or body, such as a witch's nose or an ogre's ears.

Recently, "Collectors" have begun purchasing creature sculpture for their private collections.

Los Angeles is the world center for film and video game production. Creature sculptors work on permanent staff with the larger studios and as freelance artists for the smaller studios and independent projects.
